Z1000 Wins 'Best Standard' Award in Cycle World Magazine's Ten Best Issue

After a thorough re-design followed by numerous head-to-head comparison victories, the new Kawasaki Z1000 took its rightful place at the head of the sporting standard field, when it was named as the 'Best Standard' in Cycle World's 2010 Ten Best issue. Here is what the experts at Cycle World had to say about the 2010 Z1000:

"Kawasaki has delivered an all-new machine that shares little more with its predecessors than a name and its broad-focus, real-world sporting intent."

"We have been torqued into submission by its all-new sublimely smooth, instant-power 1043cc inline-Four."

"...a sporty chassis and fully adjustable suspension upped the Z's sporting prowess and sealed the deal."

"...cranks out awesome, smooth power, while keeping its rider comfortable on the daily commute, the long tour or tearing up a deserted backroad."

"The Z fits our idea of a modern standard two wheeler, making it the naked bike of choice for 2010."

You can see the complete Ten Best results in the September 2010 issue of Cycle World.
